

Saving your home from winter damage.

Cold weather can negatively impact your property, so it is worth protecting your home to prevent any major damage.

Keep your central heating on

In very cold weather it pays to keep your central heating on constant, not on a timer, in every room, if possible. If you're going away, either leave the heating on or drain the system. And remember to leave your insurance details with a friend or neighbour.

Draining your central heating

If you're leaving your property unoccupied for a while, seek professional help to drain the system.

Burst pipes and lagging

Frozen water can crack pipes and water tanks, which are usually in the loft. This can cause extensive damage to your home.

Here are some tips to help prevent frozen pipes.

- Inspect and lag your pipes and taps. Look out for leaks, drips or any damage which could worsen
- Insulate your loft and your water tank and pipes too
- Know where your stopcock is and make sure it's in good condition

Stock up on provisions

Keep a supply of batteries, torches and provisions, including food and bottled water.

Keep your insurance documents safe

In an emergency it is important to have your insurance documents close to hand.

Put them somewhere safe and dry and tell other family members where they are in case you are not at home.

Built on solid foundations.
